CHALK THIS WAY

The site is a local commuter artery primarily used by pedestrian and cyclist students. The blank construction wall along the sidewalk conceals a day care playground and is opposite a construction site. The idea of a chalkboard intervention is to provide a place for people to write or draw their thoughts on a whim and create a place for students to express themselves. Normally an uninviting sidewalk, the installation quickly became filled with multilingual text and quirky drawings.

"I think this is a great idea for construction fences in urban areas. Perhaps it requires a timely question or provocative statement that invites/dialogue..."
